planning for growth urban and regional planning in china provides an overview of the changes in china s planning system policy and practices using concrete examples and informative details in language that is accessible enough for the undergraduate but thoroughly grounded in a wealth of research and academic experience to support academics it is the first accessible text on changing urban and regional planning in china under the process of transition from a centrally planned socialist economy to an emerging market in the world fulong wu a leading authority on chinese cities and urban and regional planning sets up the historical framework of planning in china including its foundation based on the proactive approach to economic growth the new forms of planning such as the strategic spatial plan and urban cluster plans that have emerged and stimulated rapid urban expansion and transformed compact Chinese cities into dispersed metropolises and goes on to explain the new planning practices that began to pay attention to eco cities, new towns and new development areas. Planning for growth in urban and regional planning in China demonstrates that planning is not necessarily an enemy of growth and plays an important role in Chinese urbanization and economic growth. On the other hand, it also shows planning's limitations in achieving a more sustainable and just urban future.

In today's public policy arena, the regional level is gaining increased attention as problems in policy and service delivery continue to spill over traditional urban government boundaries. This authoritative work focuses on the growing role of regions in addressing and resolving local governance problems. Urban and regional policies for metropolitan livability provides a concise, up-to-date and systematic treatment of the problems and issues involved in urban and regional policy concerns. Each policy chapter is written by a respected expert in the area and the book covers all the key policy issues that confront contemporary metropolitan areas, including transportation, the environment, affordable housing, crime, employment, poverty, education and regional governance. Each chapter outlines an issue which is followed by current thinking on problem diagnosis and problem solving as well as the prognosis for future policy success.

Dialogues in Urban and Regional Planning offers a new selection of the best urban planning scholarship from each of the world's planning school associations. The award-winning papers presented illustrate the concerns and the discourse of planning scholarship communities and provide a glimpse into planning theory and practice by planning academics around the world. All those with an interest in urban and regional planning will find this collection valuable in opening new avenues for research and debate. This book is published in association with the Global Planning Education Association Network (GPEAN) and the nine planning school associations it represents who have selected these papers based on regional competitions.

The Dialogues in Urban and Regional Planning series offers a selection of some of the best scholarship in urban and regional planning from around the world. The internationally recognized authors of these award-winning papers take up a range of salient issues from the theory and practice of planning. This 6th volume incorporates essays that explore the salient issue commonly referred to as the right to the city. This theme speaks to a growing new movement within planning theory and practice with multiple aims and strategies but with the common objective of advancing a more just and equitable world. The right to the city functions as a manifesto advancing academic explorations of the opportunities for and barriers to expanding human and environmental justice. At the same time, it extends beyond academic inquiry to engage directly with the policy, legal and political dimensions of human rights. The right to the city has been invoked by global bodies such as the United Nations Habitat and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to bolster not only their agendas around fundamental human rights but advance urban policies promoting inclusion, sustainability and resilience. Dialogues 6 offers engaging explorations into the academic expeditions by the global planning community that have helped to energize this movement. The papers assembled here through processes of peer review represent an invaluable collection to untangle the complexities of this dynamic new approach to urban and regional planning. The Dialogues in Urban and Regional Planning series is published in association with the Global Planning Education Association Network (GPEAN) and its member national and transnational planning schools associations.

the goal of this book the first in a series is to bring policymakers practitioners and scholars up to speed on the state of knowledge on various aspects of urban and regional policy what do we know about the effectiveness of select policy approaches reforms or experiments on key social and economic problems facing cities suburbs and metropolitan areas what can we say about what works what doesn't and why and what does this knowledge and experience imply for future policy questions the authors take a fresh look at several different issues e.g. economic development education land use and conceptualize how each should be thought of once the contributors have presented the essence of what is known as well as the likely implications they identify the knowledge gaps that need to be filled for the successful formulation and implementation of urban and regional policy

this work is concerned with the understanding of the structure and behaviour of urban and regional systems in developing countries professor chadwick considers not only how such systems change but also how they might be changed by some form of manipulation both these purposes necessarily involve the activity of modelling the systems concerned this study has been enriched by the author's own experience in bahrain hong kong korea and saudi arabia

Originally published in 1987, this book presents a wide-ranging review of urban, regional, economic, and environmental planning in Canada, a comprehensive source of information on Canadian planning policies. It addresses the wide variations between Canadian provinces while acknowledging similarities with programs and policies in the United States and Britain. The author documents the distinctively Canadian character of planning in Canada. Among the topics addressed in the book are the agencies of planning, the nature of urban plans, the instruments of planning, land policies, natural resources, regional planning at the federal level, regional planning and development in Ontario, regional planning in other provinces, environmental protection, planning and people, and reflections on the nature of planning in Canada. The author documents how governmental agencies handle problems of population growth, urban development, exploitation of natural resources, regional disparities, and many other issues that fall within the scope of urban and regional planning. But he goes beyond this to address matters of politics, law, economics, social organization. The book is pragmatic, eclectic, interpretive, and critical. It is a valuable contribution to international literature on planning in its political context.

This book focuses on the measurement and utilisation of quantitative indicators in the urban and regional planning fields. There has been a resurgence of academic and policy interest in using indicators to inform planning, partly in response to the current government's information-intensive approach to decision-making. The content of the book falls into three broad sections: indicators, usage, and policy-making; methodological and conceptual issues; and case studies of policy indicators.

This book provides a unique contribution to the science of sustainable societies by challenging the traditional concept of rural-urban dichotomy. It combines environmental engineering and landscape sciences perspectives on urban region issues, making the book a unique work in urban study literatures. Today's extended urban regions often maintain rural features within their boundaries and also have strong social, economic, and environmental linkages with the surrounding rural areas. These intra- and inter-linkages between urban and rural systems produce complex interdependences with global and local sustainability issues, including those of climate change, resource exploitation, ecosystem degradation, and human wellbeing. Planning and other prospective actions for the sustainability of urban regions therefore cannot solely depend on urban approaches; rather, they need to integrate broader landscape perspectives that take extended social and ecological systems into consideration. This volume shows how to untangle, diagnose, and transform urban regions through distinctive thematic contributions across a variety of academic disciplines, ranging from environmental engineering and geography to landscape ecology and urban planning. Case studies selected from across the world and investigating urban regions in East Asia, Europe, North America, and South East Asia collectively illustrate shared and differentiated drivers of sustainability challenges and provide informative inputs to global and local sustainability initiatives.

This book is comprised of articles and papers that have come about after years of academic and applied research endeavors of the practitioners and academicians in the field of urban and regional development planning. Most of these articles have already been presented and deliberated in national and international conferences held in different parts of the world namely indianapolis newcastle upon tyne rome istanbul cairo alexandria vienna stockholm jeddah riyadh jubail islamabad penang and bandung the concepts and case studies described in this book bring home the fact that the world is undergoing a gyrational transition not only are developed and developing countries getting influenced by each other and transforming due to a process of circular causation but each of the two sets of countries are also undergoing a simultaneous internal transformation due to the differential infusion of technology and indigenous entrepreneurship as a consequence highly diversified urban systems are getting integrated interactively leading to the formation of a global village and achievement of a unity in diversity
